A high-end custom joinery package was created for Hotel Indigo in Auckland's CBD. Spanning the upstairs bar, ground-floor café and private dining room, the work features highly detailed joinery designed to bring warmth, character and a relaxed hospitality feel to each space.

The upstairs bar forms the centrepiece of the package, combining stained and polished solid oak with matching Melteca, reeded glass, antique brass mirrors and Caesarstone bar tops. Integrated LED lighting within the back-bar display adds depth and warmth, while bespoke joinery throughout the café and private dining areas creates a consistent character across the hotel's hospitality spaces.

Complex solid-timber detailing and tight tolerances demanded a high level of craftsmanship and careful coordination. All components were fabricated in the Haydn & Rollett workshop before being reassembled onsite, with the team working closely with Chroma Group, the architect and other trades throughout delivery. The result is a highly finished and functional interior that met the design intent and established a strong relationship with a new client.
